6. Prohibition of sale.
If they should open a war, they foresee the consumption France must fall into by the stop of their wine and salts, wholly taken off by our two nations. Temple.
7. That which obstructs; obstacle; impediment.
The proud Dueña, full of wrathful spite
And fierce disdain to be affronted so,
Infore'd her purple beast with all her might,
That stop out of the way to overthrow. Fairy Queen.
On indeed they went: but O! not far;
A fatal stop travers'd their headlong course. Daniel.
Blessed be that God who cast rubs, stops, and hindrances in my way, when I was attempting the commission of such a sin. South's Sermons.
So melancholy a prospect should inspire us with zeal to oppose some stop to the rising torrent, and check this overflowing of ungodliness. Rogers.
8. Instrument by which the sounds of wind musick are regulated.
You would play upon me, you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery. Shakespeare.
Blest are those,
Whose blood and judgment are so well commingl'd,
That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger,
To sound what stop the please. Shakespeare. Hamlet.
The harp
Had work, and rested not; the solemn pipe,
And dulcimer, all organs of sweet stop. Milt. Par. Lost.
The found
Of instruments, that made melodious chime,
Was heard of harp and organ; and who mov'd
Their stops, and chords, was seen; his volant touch
Instinct through all proportions, low and high,
Fled, and pass'd transfere the resonant fugue. Milton.
A variety of strings may be observed on their harps, and of stops on their tubs; which shews the little foundation that such writers have gone upon, who, from a short passage in a classic author, have determined the precise shape of the ancient musical instruments, with the exact number of their pipes, strings, and stops. Addison on Italy.
9. Regulation of musical chords by the fingers.
The further a string is strained, the less superfluous goeth to a note; for it requireth good winding of a string before it will make any note at all: and in the stops of lutes, the higher they go, the less distance is between the frets. Bacon.
10. The act of applying the stops in musick.
Th' organ-found a time survives the stops.
Before it doth the dying note give up. Daniel's Civil War.
11. A point in writing, by which sentences are distinguished.
Even the iron-pointed pen,
That notes the tragick dooms of men,
Wet with tears still'd from the eyes
Of the flinty destinies,
Would have learn'd a softer style,
And have been aham'd to spoil
His life's sweet story by the haste
Of a cruel stop ill-plac'd. Crashaw.
- STO'P'COCK. n. f. [stop and cock.] A pipe made to let out liquor, stopp'd by a turning cock.
No man could spit from him without it, but would drivel like some paralytick or fool; the tongue being as a stopcock to the air, till upon its removal the spittle is driven away. Grew.
- STO'PPAGE. n. f. [from stop.] The act of stopping; the state of being stopp'd.
The effects are a stoppage of circulation by too great a weight upon the heart, and suffocation. Arbutnot.
The stoppage of a cough, or spitting, increases phlegm in the stomach. Floyer on the Humours.
- STO'PPLE, or Stepper. n. f. [from stop.] That by which any hole or the mouth of any vessel is filled up.
Bottles (winged, or carried in a wheel-barrow upon rough ground, fill not full, but leave some air; for if the liquor come close to the stopple, it cannot flower. Bacon.
There were no thuts or stopples made for the ears, that any loud or sharp noise might awaken it, as also a soft and gentle murmur provoke it to sleep. Ray on the Creation.
- STO'RAXTREE. n. f. [Astrax, Latin.]
A tree.
The flower consists of one leaf, shaped like a funnel, and cut into several segments, out of whose flower-cup rises the point, which is fixed like a nail in the forepart of the flower: this afterwards becomes a roundish fleshy fruit, including one or two seeds in hard shells. Miller.
2. A refinous and odoriferous gum.
I yielded a pleasant odour like the best myrrh, as galbanum, and sweet storax. Ecclesiast. xxiv. 15.
- STORE. n. f. [stör, in old Swedish and Runick, is much, and is prefixed to other words to intend their signification; stora, Danish; stör, Islandick, is great. The Teutonick dialects nearer to English seem not to have retained this word.]
Large number; large quantity; plenty.
The ships are fraught with store of victuals, and good quantity of treasure. Bacon.

STO

- None yet, but store hereafter from the earth
Up hither like aerial vapours flew,
Of all things transitory and vain, when fin
With vanity had fill'd the works of men. Milt. Par. Lost.
Jove, grant me length of life, and years good store
Heap on my bended back. Dryden's Juvenal.
2. A stock accumulated; a supply hoarded.
We liv'd
Supine amidst our flowing store,
We slept securely, and we dream'd of more. Dryden.
Thee, goddess, thee, Britannia's isle adores:
How has the oft exhausted all her store,
How oft in fields of death thy presence fought?
Nor thinks the mighty prize too dearly bought. Addison.
Their minds are richly fraught
With philosophick store. Thomson.
3. The state of being accumulated; hoard.
Is not this laid up in store with me, and sealed up among my treasures?
Divine Cecilia came,
Inventress of the vocal frame:
The sweet enthusiast from her sacred store
Enlarg'd the former narrow bounds,
And added length to solemn sounds. Dryden.
4. Storehouse; magazine.
Sulphurous and nitrous foam,
Concocted and adust, they reduc'd
To blackest grain, and into store convey'd. Milton.
- STORE. adj. Hoarded; laid up; accumulated.
What floods of treasure have flowed into Europe by that action, so that the cause of Christendom is raised since twenty times told: of this treasure the gold was accumulate and store treasure; but the silver is still growing. Bacon's Holy War.
- TO STORE. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To furnish; to replenish.
Wife Plato said the world with men was stor'd,
That succour each to other might afford.
Her face with thousand beauties blest;
Her mind with thousand virtues stor'd;
Her pow'r with boundless joy confest,
Her person only not ador'd. Prior.
2. To stock against a future time.
Some were of opinion that it were best to stay where they were, until more aid and store of victuals were come; but others said the enemy were but barely stor'd with victuals, and therefore could not long hold out. Knolly's Hist. of the Turks.
One having stor'd a pond of four acres with carps, tench, and other fish, and only put in two small pikes, at seven years end, upon the draught, not one fish was left, but the two pikes grown to an excessive bigness. Holt.
The mind reflects on its own operations about the ideas got by sensation, and thereby stores itself with a new set of ideas, which I call ideas of reflection.
To store the vessel let the care be mine,
With water from the rocks and rosy wine,
And life-sustaining bread. Pope's Odyssey.
3. To lay up; to hoard.
Let the main part of the corn be a common stock, laid in and stor'd up, and then delivered out in proportion. Bacon.
- STO'REHOUSE. n. f. [store and house.] Magazine; treasury; place in which things are hoarded and deposited against a future time.
By us it is willingly confessed, that the Scripture of God is a storehouse abounding with inestimable treasures of wisdom and knowledge, in many kinds over and above things in this kind barely necessary.
They greatly joyed merry tales to feign,
Of which a storehouse did with her remain. Fairy Queen.
Suffer us to famish, and their storehouses cramm'd with grain!
Joseph opened all the storehouses, and sold unto the Egyptians. Gen. xli. 56.
To these high pow'rs a storehouse doth pertain,
Where they all arts and gen'ral reasons lay;
Which in the soul, ev'n after death, remain,
And no Lethæan flood can wash away.
My heart hath been a storehouse long of things
And sayings laid up, portending strange events. Parad. Reg.
The image of God was resplendent in man's practical understanding, namely that storehouse of the soul, in which are treasured up the rules of action and the seeds of morality. South's Sermons.
- As many different sounds as can be made by single articulations, so many letters there are in the storehouse of nature. Hall.
- STO'RER. n. f. [from store.] One who lays up.
STO'RIED. adj. [from story.] Adorned with historical pictures.
Let my due feet never fail
To walk the studious cloisters pale,
And love the high embow'd roof,
With antic pillar mally proof,
And storied windows richly dight,
Casting a dim religious light. Milton.

STO

- Some greedy minion or imperious wife,
The trophy'd arches, story'd halls invade. Pope.
- STORK. n. f. [trorp, Saxon.] A bird of passage famous for the regularity of its departure.
Its beak and legs are long and red; it feeds upon serpents, frogs, and insects: its plumage would be quite white, were not the extremity of its wings, and also some part of its head and thighs black: it sits for thirty days and lays but four eggs. Formerly they would not eat the stork; but at present it is much esteemed for the deliciousness of its flesh: they go away in the middle of August, and return in spring. Calmet.
The stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times. Jer.
- STORKSBILL. n. f. An herb.
- STORM. n. f. [storm, Welsh; trorp, Saxon; storm, Dutch; sturm, Italian.]
1. A tempest; a commotion of the elements.
O turn thy rudder hitherward a while,
Here may thy storm-beat vessel safely ride.
We hear this fearful tempest sing,
Yet seek no shelter to avoid the storm.
Them the upstays, mindless the while
Herself, though fairest unsupported flower,
From her best prop so far and storm to high.
Sulphurous hail shot after us in storm.
Then stay my child! storms beat and rolls the main;
Oh, beat those storms and roll the seas in vain. Pope.
2. Assault on a fortified place.
How by storm the walls were won,
Or how the victor lack'd and burnt the town. Dryden.
3. Commotion; sedition; tumult; clamour; bustle.
Whilst I in Ireland nourish a mighty band,
I will stir up in England some black storm. Shakespeare.
Her sister
Began to scold and raise up such a storm,
That mortal ears might hardly endure the din. Shakespeare.
4. Affliction; calamity; distress.
5. Violence; vehemence; tumultuous force.
As of as we are delivered from those either imminent or present calamities, against the storm and tempest whereof we all instantly crave favour from above, let it be a question what we should render unto God for his blessings, universally, sensibly, and extraordinarily bestowed. Hooker.
- TO STORM. v. a. [from the noun.] To attack by open force.
From ploughs and harrows sent to seek renown,
They fight in fields, and storm the shaken town. Dryden.
There the brazen tow'r was storm'd of old,
When Jove defended in almighty gold. Pope.
- TO STORM. v. n.
1. To raise tempests.
So now he storms with many a sturdy stour,
So now his blustering blast each coast doth scour. Spenser.
2. To rage; to fume; to be loudly angry.
Hoarse, and all in rage,
As mock'd they storm. Milton's Paradise Lost.
When you return, the master storms, the lady scolds. Swift.
While thus they rail, and scold, and storm,
It passes but for common form. Swift.
- STORMY. adj. [from storm.]
1. Tempestuous.
Bellowing clouds burst with a stormy found,
And with an armed winter strew the ground. Addison's Italy.
The tender apples from their parents rent
By stormy shocks, must not neglected lie. Philips.
2. Violent; passionate.
The stormy sultan rages at our stay. Irene.
- STORY. n. f. trorp, Saxon; storie, Dutch; storia, Italian; isoria.]
1. History; account of things past.
The fable of the dividing of the world between the three sons of Saturn, arose from the true story of the dividing of the earth between the three brethren the sons of Noah. Raleigh.
Ther I have heard relating what was done
Ere my remembrance: now hear me relate
My story which perhaps thou hast not heard.
To king Artaxerxes, thy servants Rathumnus the story-writer, and Smellius the scribe. Esdr. ii. 17.
The four great monarchies make the subject of ancient story, and are related by the Greek and Latin authors. Temple.
Governments that once made such a noise, as founded upon the deepest counsels and the strongest force; yet by some slight miscarriage, which let in ruin upon them, are now so utterly extinct, that nothing remains of them but a name; nor are there the least traces of them to be found but only in story. South's Sermons.
2. Small tale; petty narrative; account of a single incident.
In the road between Bern and Soleure, a monument erected by the republic of Bern, tells us the story of an Englishman not to be met with in any of our own writers. Addison.
3. An idle or trifling tale; a petty fiction.
These flaws and starts, would well become
A woman's story at a winter's fire,
Authoris'd by her grandame. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

STO

- This scene had some bold Greek or British bard
Beheld of old, what stories had we heard
Of fancies, fays, and the nymphs their dames,
Their feasts, their revels, and their am'rous flames. Denham.
My maid left on the table one of her story-books, which I found full of strange impertinence, of poor servants who came to be ladies. Swift.
4. [trorp, place, Saxon.] A floor; a flight of rooms.
Avoid enormous heights of seven stories, as well as irregular forms, and the contrary fault of low distended fronts. Wotton.
- Sonnets or elegies to Chloris,
Might raise a house about two stories; Swift.
A lyric ode would flate; a catch
Would tile; an epigram would thatch. Swift.
- TO STORY. v. a. [from the noun.] To relate.
1. To tell in history; to relate.
How worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.
'Tis not vain or fabulous
What the sage poets, taught by th' heav'nly muse,
Story'd of old in high immortal verse,
Of dire chimera's and enchanted isles, Milton.
And rifted rocks, whose entrance leads to hell. Milton.
It is storied of the brazen Colossus, in the island of Rhodes, that it was seventy cubits high; the thumbs of it being so big, that no man could grasp one of them about with both his arms. Wilkins.
- Recite them, nor in erring pity fear,
To wound with storied griefs the filial ear. Pope.
2. To range one under another.
Because all the parts of an undisturbed fluid are of equal gravity, or gradually placed or storied according to the difference of it; any concretion that can be supposed to be naturally and mechanically made in such a fluid, must have a like structure of its several parts; that is, either be all over of a similar gravity, or have the more ponderous parts nearer to its basis. Bentley's Sermons.
- STORYTELLER. n. f. [story and tell.] One who relates tales; an historian. In contempt.
In such a future all would seek a share,
And every fool will fancy he is there;
Old storytellers too must pine and die,
To see their antiquated wit laid by;
Like her, who mis'd her name in a lampoon,
And griev'd to find herself decay'd so soon. Dryden.
Company will be no longer peffered with dull, dry, tedious storytellers. Swift's Polite Conversation.
- STOVE. n. f. [stov, Islandick, a fire place; tropos, Saxon; stove, French; stove, Dutch.]
1. A hot house; a place artificially made warm.
Fishermen who make holes in the ice, to dip up such fish with their nets as resort thither for breathing, light on swallows congealed in clods, of a slimy substance, and carrying them home to their stoves, the warmth recovereth them to life and flight. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.
The heat which arises out of the lesser spiracles brings forth nitre and sulphur; some of which it affixes to the tops and sides of the grotto's, which are usually so hot as to serve for natural stoves or sweating vaults. Woodward.
The most proper place for unction is a stove. Wifeman.
2. A place in which fire is made, and by which heat is communicated.
If the season prove exceeding piercing, in your great house kindle some charcoals; and when they have done smoking, put them into a hole funk a little into the floor, about the middle of it. This is the safest stove. B Evelyn.
- TO STOVE. v. a. [from the noun.] To keep warm in a house artificially heated.
For December, January, and the latter part of November, take such things as are green all winter; orange trees, lemon trees, and myrtles, if they be stoved; and sweet marjoram warm set. Bacon.
- TO STOUND. v. n. [stounds, I grieved, Islandick.]
1. To be in pain or sorrow. Out of use.
2. For stund. Spenser.
- STOUND. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. Sorrow; grief; mishap. Out of use. The Scots retain it.
Begin and end the bitter baleful stounds, Swift.
If less than that I fear, no mortal labour stound. Fair, Queen.
The fox his copesmate found, Hubbard.
To whom complaining his unhappy stounds,
He with him far'd some better chance to find. Hubbard.
2. Astonishment; amazement.
Thus we stood as in a stound, Goy.
And wet with tears, like dew, the ground. Spenser.
- STOUR. n. f. [stov, Runick, a battle; trorp, Saxon, to disturb.] Assault; incursion; tumult. Obsolete.
And he that harrow'd hell with heavy stour,
The faulty souls from thence brought to his heavenly bowr. Fairy Queen.
Love
